Taking the plunge

LYNNETTE OOSTMEYER | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Members of the group Vanilla Ice Ice Baby run out of campus lake Saturday during the 2013 Polar Plunge. This year's plunge featured 231 registered participants and raised $40,355 for the Special Olympics. Each plunger was asked to raise $75 for the cause, and many participated in groups with friends and families.

Security Dawgs hack first place

ZACH MARTIN
Daily Egyptian

The university's Security Dawgs protected their cyber turf during the weekend.

The team took home first place and the state championship at the Illinois Collegiate Cyber Defense Competition hosted Saturday at SIU. The competition, which is designed to test network security and information systems students' skills and quickness, develops and expands the participating schools' information security programs,, said Tom Imboden, Security Dawgs coach and assistant professor of information systems technologies.

"Students learn and use skills directly applicable to their future careers and get a leg up for job hunting," he said. "Several big companies sponsor and recruit employees from team members."

Guantanamo Bay's events to affect U.S. history

MATT DARAY
Daily Egyptian

Global experts brought the university their views on one of the world's most notorious prisons during a SIU Law School event Friday.

The university's law school hosted "Guantanamo Bay: What Next?," a symposium that targeted the U.S.-owned Cuban detention center — established in 2002 to hold detainees the U.S. determined to be connected with enemies in Afghanistan and Iraq — and its relation to international law and the Constitution. Questionable conditions and interrogation practices keep Guantanamo Bay in the news, and the symposium's participants gave their opinions of the past, present and future of the prison.

Keynote speaker William Lietzau, deputy assistant secretary of rule of law and detainee policy for the U.S. Department of Defense, said Guantanamo Bay's creation was an attempt to deal with terrorism such as the 9/11 attacks without passing laws to solve the problem.

"Moving detainees to Guantanamo was a practical solution that, to the people who made that decision at the time, seemed like the best answer for some practical problems they were dealing with," he said.

Though an official date has not been given for Guantanamo Bay's closure, Lietzau said the prison will affect U.S. history and laws.

"I don't think there is any question that, for any number of reasons, Guantanamo Bay, that term will have a negative impact on many people as they reflect on the United States conduct in this war," he said.

However, Lietzau said he is proud of the country's leadership in determining the best practices to hold detainees, he said.

While Guantanamo Bay might have a rough history, Lietzau said he thinks the prison will result in national and international law changes to determine how to deal with holding terrorists.

"I think that international law will develop the same way it has throughout history, and it's often in the aftermath of conflict that we find that development," he said.

Other speakers discussed how the prison's legalities worked as well as the complexity of the issue of what is legal at the facility.

TIFFANY BLANCHETTE | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense William Lietzau of the U.S. Department of Defense speaks Friday at Lesar Law Building during the School of Law's Guantanamo Bay forum. Lietzau's keynote address, "Detention in 21st-Century Armed Conflict," addressed detention paradigms and examined the two branches of public international law: law of peace and law of war.

Dual degree initiative could speed up higher education

MATT DARAY
Daily Egyptian

U.S. students may soon have more degree opportunities before they even leave high school.

During his Feb. 12 State of the Union address, President Barack Obama discussed an educational program that allows students to simultaneously graduate with an associate's degree and a high school diploma. Both Germany and several New York high schools participate in this program; however, area educators are divided on whether the idea can be implemented nationwide.

University President Glenn Poshard said similar options exist for prospective college students.

"We already have those type of programs available," he said. "We have advanced placement classes, which seniors can take while they are in high school. If they qualify, they get credit for that at the college level."

While Obama's idea might increase the number of students with college degrees, Poshard said it probably would not increase university enrollment.

"We still have a great number of students who want the full university experience for four years," he said.

Mike Dreith, president of John A. Logan College in Carterville, said Obama's increased high-school efficiency plan can work because he has seen it happen.

"I was in one (program) with my previous job in Texas, where we had some of the students graduate from college the week before they graduated from high school," he said. "It is entirely possible."

Dreith said the degree program takes an incredible amount of commitment from the high schools and the students, but it could be used nationwide. However, Drieth doubts the program would prompt a large increase in enrollment at John A. Logan.

"The truth of the matter is, our district is not growing by leaps and bounds," he said. "I think something like this will marginally improve our enrollment numbers."

However, Dreith said he is unsure whether area high schools would be interested in pursuing an associate's degree option.

While several college administrators support Obama's ideas, several high school administrators said it may take more work before such a plan could be implemented.

Marion High School Principal Steve Smith said the idea is great, but is not practical at this time.

"The problem with (Obama's) plan, and many of the plans that are discussed at that level, is that it is easy to talk about it," he said. "Yeah, it's a great idea, but all these new ideas and new programs that are longer require high schools to increase space and new technology, all while funding is being cut. So it's just another example of them asking schools to do more with less."

Smith said Obama's suggestion is an interesting idea to pursue, but remains a future goal funding-wise. He is unsure if his school would support it now. He said the plan would take a while to implement because Marion High School is focused on common-core initiatives, including national and state education expectations, and it would be difficult to add more programs.

The team played as network-security technicians for a business during the competition. Its task was to defend its cyber domain from attacks by “hackers,” played by cyber-security professionals while simultaneously completing various network tasks and maintaining the network’s stability and security.

“The teams are asked to perform tasks that are completely unexpected and often times are designed to have them intentionally make their systems less secure, giving the ‘red team,’ or the hacker bad guys, an easier time,” Imboden said.

The Security Dawgs competed against Lakeland College while competing online against other universities such as DePaul University, the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and Illinois State University. The team will next participate in the Midwest Regional competition at Moraine Valley Community College March 22 and 23 in Palos Hills.

Imboden said the team’s preparation led to success despite the fierce competition.

“They have been practicing since the beginning of fall semester,” he said. “They talked about strategy and even set up their own mock-up of the competition environment to practice.”

Imboden said the way the team’s interaction also added to its composure during the stressful competition.

“You can tell that the group has bonded and has a camaraderie that attributed to their success,” he said.

While Imboden said his leadership and experience helped the team, he gave most of the credit to Travis Cooper, a senior from Charleston studying information systems technology and the team’s captain.

“With three little kids at home, I’m limited in the amount of time I can spend,” Imboden said. “I try to stress the framework of tasks and strategies to approach the competition, and Travis works to get them all practiced and ready to go when the competition starts.”

Cooper said the competition’s pace adds to its difficulty.

“While the competition moves much faster than a regular day at the office for an information security employee, it gives the students a great opportunity to see all aspects of what it will be like in a job,” he said.

The ability to practice high pressure, real-world cyber-security skills — along with competition’s increasing national recognition in network security circles nationwide — sold Cooper on participation, he said.

“Employers are becoming pretty familiar with the (competition), and when you can mention that you participated in the event, it really can help a student land a job in the field,” he said.

Cooper said team practices include setting up sample network systems and analyzing their strengths and weaknesses to determine where potential attacks could come from.

Even though his team won, Cooper said the competition day’s scope took its toll.

“The tasks we are given are often tasks that would take much longer to do in the real world versus the competition environment,” he said. “We get so many of the tasks throughout the competition that there becomes a point where you just feel like they are coming in nonstop.”

Imani Hudson, a junior from Chicago studying information systems technology, was a team alternate during the competition. She said the team put its most successful defensive strategies into play, and that planning won the competition.

“Being a part of the team was definitely a learning experience for me,” she said.

Cooper said his prior participation in a competition called the National Cyber League added to his leadership ability.

“It was an individual competition that put you more in the role of the attacker for some of the events,” he said. “It gave students a chance to try out some of the tools and techniques that are used against them in the CCDC.”

Imboden said cyber-security training and experience is critical in today’s business climate, and businesses and universities who can’t keep up may suffer.

The university does offer classes to improve students’ cyber security skills, he said.

“The university has recently taken great strides to ensure that their systems are protected and are constantly maintaining and improving their security,” he said.

GUANTANAMO

Michael J. Strauss, a U.S. journalist who was stationed at the Center for Diplomatic and Strategic Studies in Paris, said Guantanamo Bay’s problem is the way the country attained it. Cuba’s prison leasing allowed indefinite use of the facility, he said.

Strauss said other minor wordings and executive agreement technicalities between the countries made in the 1903 Cuban-American Treaty — which gave the U.S. control over the Guantanamo Bay area in exchange for the Republic of Cuba’s ultimate sovereignty over the area — allowed the U.S. to do whatever it wished with the land.

“The U.S. was the only one of the two parties that could exercise jurisdiction and control, and because the definition of a naval station is so fluid, that jurisdiction and control can extend to anything the U.S. does there,” he said.

Strauss said other lease technicalities allowed the U.S. to remain in the area after the Cuban Revolution. He said only some U.S. authority and legal action applies there because it is a leased territory, and the U.S. jurisdiction remains unclear. It is also unclear if Cuba is responsible for Guantanamo Bay human rights because of these legalities, he said.

One expert addressed how the detainees’ future is uncertain even after the end of conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Eric Jensen, associate professor of law at Brigham Young University and former U.S. Army Cavalry officer and judge advocate, said there are issues that deal with how to release detainees, especially since President Barack Obama announced in his State of the Union address that the U.S. will leave Afghanistan by the end of 2014.

Jensen said prisoners of war are required by law to be released after the war has ended. However, he said the U.S. leaving Afghanistan does not mean detainees are no longer a threat because al-Qaeda occupies many nations.

While the discussion may not end the Guantanamo Bay debate, one administrator said she felt the event was beneficial.

Alicia Ruiz, director of communications and outreach at the university’s law school, said the law school has hosted symposiums for several years. Ruiz said some SIU professors were invited to visit Guantanamo Bay and was interested in holding the symposium.

“Everything I’ve heard has been very positive so far,” she said. “We don’t have ... a lot of people in this geographic area that would ever represent a detainee or be directly involved, but I still think it’s very helpful for them to understand those issues and the larger policy issues involved in all of the discussions.”

DEGREE

Herrin High School Principal Terry Ryker said the plan could succeed, but high schools and colleges would have to work in tandem.

“I think anything can be implemented ... I think there’d be a lot of hurdles and difficulty to overcome,” he said. “You’d have to have a lot of your high schools working closely with, probably, the local junior colleges at the present time to figure out how this is going to work.”

Ryker said it would take several years to fully implement the plan into schools if they choose to adopt it. While Herrin High School would like to adopt the plan, he said, state and federal funding would be an issue.

“I think that’s a huge (problem), especially here in Illinois,” he said. “It’s hard for something more with less money. I mean, I don’t know how that’s going to be practical. We’re going to have to change the way money is allocated and the state of Illinois does not allocate it very efficiently or fairly.”

Carbondale contributes to viral videos

NICOLE HESTER | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Students dressed in costumes and danced during the filming of the SIU Harlem Shake Saturday at Cali's. SIU is the latest university to make their own version of the viral internet sensation. Brett Mueller, a junior from St. Louis studying automotive technology and the official creator of the event, said he thought SIU could make a better Harlem shake video than the ones other colleges have produced. "I think it's bigger than a few of the ones I've seen," Mueller said.

Salukis slam Gamecocks in Alabama

JACK ROBINSON
Daily Egyptian

After the SIU men’s baseball team’s offense struggled in its previous four games, the Salukis outscored the Gamecocks 24-10 in two games during the team’s weekend series against Jacksonville State University in Jacksonville, Ala.

The Salukis had 17 hits in two games against Jacksonville State and won the two games 12-6 and 12-4. SIU previously struggled with offensive production, and coach Ken Henderson said he was pleased with how well the Salukis performed during the weekend.

“To finish the first game the way we did and then come out and have 17 hits in the second game was great,” he said. “There weren’t a lot of cheap hits, either. They were good at bats and balls that were hit well.”

SIU sophomore pitcher Sam Coonrod started the series against Jacksonville State pitcher junior Adam Polk. The Salukis started scoring early when they scored six consecutive runs in three innings. The first run came in the second inning, when junior first baseman Ryan Casillas hit a home run to left field to lead by one. Later in the inning, junior Donny Duschinsky scored on an error by the Gamecocks to lead by two.

The fourth inning brought in three more Saluki runs to increase the team’s lead to five. Senior center fielder Rennie Troggio and senior second baseman Jake Welch started the runs when they scored off of a double to right field by junior catcher Matt Jones to go ahead of the Gamecocks 6-1.

SIU capped the game with a four-run surge in the top of the ninth inning. Junior outfielder Austin Montgomery scored the first run of the inning when Troggio hit a pop fly to center field. Jones hit a double down the left field line to score senior designated hitter Brock Harding, junior shortstop Ryan Rosthenhausler and Jake Welch.

Coonrod pitched four innings Friday. He walked six batters and allowed only one hit and two runs in his second start of the year. Junior pitcher Brad Dust relieved Coonrod and won the game to improve his record to 2-0 on the season.

The Salukis scored 12 runs during Saturday’s game to beat the Gamecocks 12-4. SIU’s offensive production was balanced by outstanding pitching. Senior pitcher Cody Forsythe won his first game of the season Saturday. In six innings, Forsythe allowed six hits, three runs and struck out five batters in six innings.

The Salukis continued it’s scoring streak all the way up to the sixth inning. SIU scored eight runs in five innings, which is more than if scored in the first three games of the season. Freshman Anthony Shimkus relieved Forsythe during the seventh inning in his second appearance of the season. Shimkus allowed three hits in one inning, and he allowed only one run.

The Salukis finished Saturday’s game with another ninth-inning scoring marathon. Rosthenhausler first singled to left field, which allowed Troggio to score. The second run came when Jones hit a fly out to center field and Welch scored. The game’s final run came when Montgomery hit a single through the middle to score Rosthenhausler and take the game 12-4.

Henderson said he was pleased with his team’s performance, especially after early-season struggles.

“Both games here so far we’ve looked like the hitters that we’re capable of being,” he said. “Credit coach Strain and coach Judkins. Those guys worked extremely hard this week, along with our players making adjustments and working on things, so they deserve a lot of credit because we’ve looked like a different ball club so far this weekend.”

The Salukis will conclude their southern road trip Tuesday when they travel to Austin Peay State University to face the Governors at 3 p.m.

Jack Robinson can be reached at jrobinson@dailyegyptian.com or 533-3311 ext.269.

TENNIS

SIU continued its winning ways in singles play as every Saluki earned a win.

Delsart topped Carre 6-0, 6-2 at the No. 1 spot to improve to 11-6 on the season.

Love won her first two dual match wins of the year as she beat her opponent 6-0, 6-0.

Dien won her eighth-straight match after defeating Karac 6-3, 6-0. The senior is now 12-5 on the season.

The Salukis picked up where they left off in the nightcap against McKendree (1-1) as they did not record one loss in singles or doubles play.

Dien and freshman Abigail Plecki defeated McKendree’s Kelcie Comley and Nathalia Oliveira 8-4 in the No. 2 doubles-play spot, and sophomores Gisela Cairo Baza and Ariadna Cairo Baza bested their opponents 8-2 in the No. 3 spot.

Gisela Cairo Baza beat her opponent 6-0, 7-5 at the No. 4 spot in singles play to record her fourth win of the season.

Plecki won her first dual match and, beat McKendree’s Erika Thomas-Smith 6-1, 6-0. The freshman is now 6-4 on the season.

Coach Audra Nothwehr said she was impressed with her team’s play in both matches, but her team’s focus stood out more.

“Our focus was on ourselves,” she said. “I wanted us to focus on how we were playing and not necessarily what the score would end up being or how our opponents were doing, and I think we did that.”

Nothwehr said there were goals in practice that the team looked to improve on and the team responded by meeting those goals in the doubleheader.

“In doubles, we wanted them to start closing with their volleys, (and) I saw that. In singles, we’re working on transitions a lot, (and) I saw that,” she said. “I think if you stay focused on just a few goals, then they will focus on those instead of the overall, ‘OK, get a win.’”

The women’s tennis team is now finished with their indoor season, and Nothwehr said it will focus on playing outdoors.

The Salukis will continue their 2013 season March 12 when they travel to Miami to take on Florida International.

The Salukis started slow against the Shockers and could not overcome their 11-3 run through the game’s first six minutes. Wichita held the Salukis to just 32 percent shooting in the first half and just 38.9 percent on the night.

The Shockers got off to a fast start and continued the trend as they shot 55.2 percent on the night.

Salukis rally for late overtime win

MATT FERGUSON
Daily Egyptian

Saluki senior forward Jeff Early's clutch shooting sent SIU into an overtime 74-68 win against Miami University, of Ohio

The Salukis (12-16, 4-12 Missouri Valley Congerence) saw a fast first-half start as they gained a 22-9 lead within the game's first 15 minutes. The Redhawks (8-17, 3-9 Mid-American Conference) mounted a 17-3 comeback in the half's last five minutes as they eventually took a 26-25 lead at halftime.

Early led the team's scoring in the first half with 10 points but did not stop there as he continued to score a career-high 31 points for the game.

"We don't win the ball game unless Jeff Early is in a uniform," coach Barry Hinson said. "At that last moment, you have to go with your seniors or your best players to make plays, and certainly in this game Jeff was one of those guys."

The rest of the game was a battle as the score tied six times and the lead changed eight. Both sides attempted to seize control of the momentum, but it was a seesaw battle all night. Early tried to shift the momentum with his back-to-back breakaway dunks, and 5-foot-9 senior guard Kendal Brown-Surles leapt up to block a shot by 6-foot-11 Redhawks junior center Drew McGhee.

Coach Hinson said what he saw astounded him.

"He's my height and blocks a (6-foot-11) guy's shot and comes down and makes a three," Hinson said. "He had just turned it over, and I'm giving him the look of the devil. There is fire coming out of my eye-sockets, and he goes down there and blocks it and I'm still giving him the eye socket fireball as he comes down and hits the three. I just let him sit down, and I didn't holler at him."

The Redhawks held a slim 2-point lead with seven seconds remaining in the game. The ball then made its way to Early, who hit a jumper to tie the game at 56 with one second left.

CHRIS ZOELLER | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Senior guard Jeff Early, right, throws his fist in celebration Saturday during the Salukis' overtime victory against Miami of Ohio University at SIU Arena. Early posted a career-high 31 points and his eighth double-double of the season. SIU trailed 54-56 with four seconds left in regulation when Early hit a buzzer-beater that forced the game into overtime. Early started SIU's 17-6 overtime run with a 3-pointer that gave the Salukis a 74-68 victory in the BracketBusters matchup.

Early said the plan was to let junior guard Desmar Jackson post up against one of the smaller Redhawk guards for the game's final shot. The Salukis drew up a play looking for someone to make a play when they saw the double-team in the post. That someone was Early, and he wanted to have the ball in the final moments.

"In my head, I'm just like, 'I hope I can get this ball somehow,'" Early said. "He found me and gave me the ball, and I was going toward my left hand. I just faded away, and as soon as it came out in my hand I was thinking, 'Dang, this is about to go in.' It felt good as soon as I let it go, and I'm just glad that it went in."

Jackson led the Salukis in overtime with 9 points and two steals as they went on to outscore the Redhawks 18-12 in extended play to seal the win. Miami of Ohio University coach John Cooper said his team played well in the first but could not finish.

"We played well enough in the second half to win the basketball game," he said, "but they hit a tough shot to go into overtime. In overtime we just had too many mental breakdowns. I could go on and on down the list, but we just didn't play quite well enough."

This is the Salukis' third win in the last four BracketBuster, as it gives the team a 8-3 record since 2003. Hinson said their matchup is a must watch for fans.

"We have an opportunity to celebrate the career of three young men on Wednesday night," he said. "I'd really like to send these guys off with a bang. The second most important game that we play here all year long is when we honor our seniors, and I would really appreciate it if people would come out and help us celebrate their careers here."

MVC woes continue

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

MATT FERGUSON
Daily Egyptian

The Salukis have given up 161 points during the weekend's two games, resulting in their 12th-straight game against Missouri Valley Conference opponents.

SIU's first 81-74 loss came against Missouri State (14-13, 6-9) in Springfield, Mo. The Salukis (4-21, 1-13) kept the final score within 10 points for the third time in their last four games.

They battled the Lady Bears all night thanks to Saluki freshman center Dyana Pierre, who posted a career-high 18 points and snagged 15 rebounds on the night. Junior forward Jordyn Courier added 10 points and two blocks.

"It is just one or two things every time that we just have to finish," interim-coach Adrienne Harlow said. "It's unfortunate. They really did play hard, and I want for them to win and to be rewarded for what they are doing."

In the end, SIU's performance was not enough as the Lady Bears grabbed a late two-possession lead with less than three minutes left in the game.

Harlow said the team's overaggressive play was its downfall.

"We were trying to force a little bit too much instead of sticking with what we had been doing," she said. "When we had the pace going our way, we were doing great. When it slowed down a little, that hurt us."

Saturday's game was not nearly as close as the MVC No. 1 team Wichita State (19-8, 13-2) outscored the Salukis 80-55.

Tennis takes two at home

TERRANCE PEACOCK
Daily Egyptian

The SIU women's tennis team emerged undefeated against both Austin Peay and McKendree 7-0 in a home doubleheader Friday at Sports Blast.

The Salukis (6-1) are on a six-match winning streak and picked up their second and third sweeps of the season after winning every match in two sets.

Seniors Melanie Delsart and Anastacia Simons led the way as the country's No. 36 duo bested Ornella Di Salvo and Andra Cornea 8-1 at the No. 1 spotIn doubles competition against Austin Peay (0-5), to improve to 18-2 on the season.

Delsart and Simons communicated well with each other on the court and easily won against Austin Peay's duo, who couldn't find a rhythm against SIU's top doubles team.

Juniors Korey Love and Anita Lee struggled in their match against Austin Peay's Vanessa Tavares and Alison Carre, but they battled back to win 8-7 in the No. 2 spot.

The match went back and forth as Love and Lee couldn't pick up any momentum against Austin Peay's duo the match continued, Love and Lee capitalized on errors and found a way to pick up a tough win against a resilient tandem.

At the No. 3 spot, senior Jennifer Dien and sophomore Natasha Tomishima finished their counterparts 8-1 to continue the Salukis' doubles-play dominance. Dien and Tomishima rattled Austin Peay's Julie Covington and Jovana Karac early, and cruised to an easy victory. Dien and Tomishima are now 12-4 on the season.
